Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Sophia was first activated on February 14, 2016 and made its first public appearance in mid-March 2016 at South by Southwest in Austin, Texas, United States. The robot, modelled after the ancient Egyptian Queen Nefertiti, is known for its human-like appearance and behaviour compared to previous robotic variants. As of 2018, Sophia's architecture includes scripting software, a chat system, and an AI system designed for general reasoning. Sophia imitates human gestures and facial expressions and is able to answer certain questions and make simple conversations on predefined topics like the weather.

Sophia uses speech recognition technology from Alphabet Inc., which is the parent company of Google, and is designed to get smarter over time. Its speech ability is provided by a text-to-speech engine, and also allows it to sing. Sophia's intelligence software is designed by Hanson Robotics. The AI program analyses conversations and extracts data that allows it to improve responses in the future.

They designed Sophia to be a suitable companion for the elderly at nursing homes, or to help crowds at large events or parks. They have said that they hope that the robot can ultimately interact with other humans sufficiently to gain social skills. Sophia is marketed as a "social robot" that can mimic social behaviour and induce feelings of love in humans.

Sophia has at least nine robot humanoid "siblings" who were also created by Hanson Robotics. Around 2019–20, Hanson released "Little Sophia" as a companion that could teach children how to code.
